Introduction:

A glimpse into the future of creative work (and why I wrote this book)

November 30, 2022 11:06 am.

The moment the world changed forever. And a day I'll never forget.

That's when ChatGPT — an artificial intelligence system optimized for dialogue with users — was made available to the general public, for free.

VIP of All VIP
MONEYVIPPROGRAM.COM
-> There's no end to amazing unlimited shares <-

moneyvipprogram.com

And yes, I know the time — to the exact minute.

Because moments later, my phone was blowing up all afternoon.

With texts from old colleagues asking if I'd seen it yet…

With emails from students asking if their careers were in jeopardy…

And with questions from former clients asking if and how they should be using this new powerful tool in their business…

And for good reason:

No tool … no app … no software in history had ever captured public attention quite like ChatGPT.

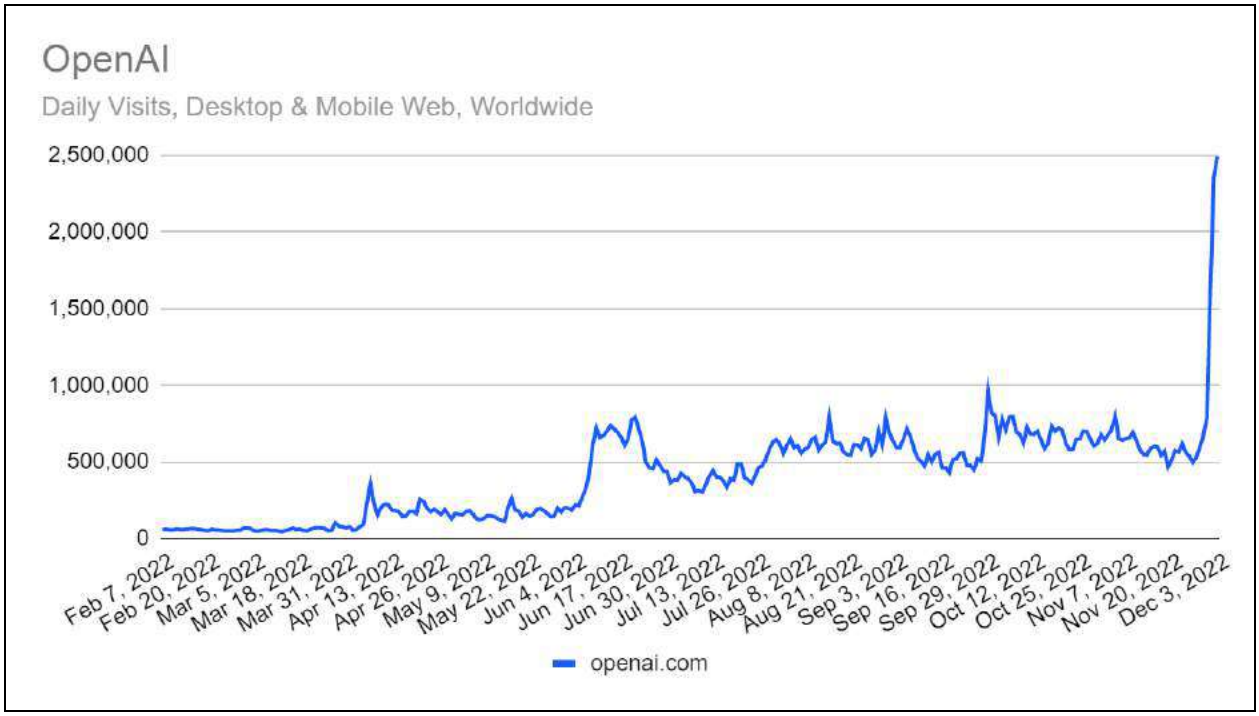

To reach 1 million users, it took Spotify almost 5 months (150 days).

Instagram took 2.5 months (75 days).

But ChatGPT eclipsed 1 million users in just 5 days.

VIP of All VIP
MONEYVIPPROGRAM.COM
-> There's no end to amazing unlimited shares <-

moneyvipprogram.com

The question is why?

What made this so different from other AI tools and software releases?

Because, to put it bluntly, it was unlike anything the world had seen.

For the first time ever, you could ask AI complex questions and get clearly explained answers in seconds.

You could quiz it for fun facts and be delighted by its replies.

You could even tell it to write sketch comedy scenes that would make even the most heavy critics crack a laugh.

VIP of All VIP
MONEYVIPPROGRAM.COM
-> There's no end to amazing unlimited shares <-

And most importantly for knowledge workers, you could get it to perform complex tasks like draft a legal document for a new business…

Or write up a 2,000 word research paper on why you should drink more water…

Or even tackle key pieces of sales and marketing copy that businesses rely on…

In other words, it left every artificial intelligence tool of the past in the dust.

And a lot of people got worried about their future in careers where writing, critical thinking, and communicating played a key part.

"Is ChatGPT going to replace me?"

That was the question on everyone's mind.

But to be honest…

When I first got word of the tool, I thought it was mostly hype that would blow over in a few weeks time.

Because I'd been around long enough to see a few cycles like this.

VIP of All VIP
MONEYVIPPROGRAM.COM
-> There's no end to amazing unlimited shares <-

And unless you've been hiding under a rock, you've probably seen them too. The pattern is easy to spot once it begins….

Step 1: A new technology comes on the scene.

Step 2: Great marketing helps it take hold of public attention.

Step 3: Fear creeps in for what this means for our future.

Step 4: Things settle down shortly after. And we all realize - "woah that wasn't really that big of a deal."

Funny enough, this exact story played out in the copywriting world just a few years earlier — when tools like Copy.AI and Jasper came onto the scene in late 2020 and early 2021.

Everyone said, "Copywriting is dead."

But within a few weeks, that proved to be a spark that never quite ignited.

So I thought a similar story might play out with ChatGPT.

But I was wrong.

Because this was a different beast.

And we're now realizing a lot of what came before wasn't "artificial intelligence" in the same way.

VIP of All VIP
MONEYVIPPROGRAM.COM
-> There's no end to amazing unlimited shares <-

moneyvipprogram.com

They were more similar to sophisticated text generators than true AI.

ChatGPT was not like that at all.

It could write code.

It could build apps.

It could pass some of the most elite “intelligence” tests in the world…

VIP of All VIP
MONEYVIPPROGRAM.COM
-> There's no end to amazing unlimited shares <-

moneyvipprogram.com

And most notably of all:

It allowed for a true dialogue between the user and the AI.

Yes, you could "talk" to it.

Which wasn't just a leap forward.

It was a "man on the moon" quantum step in a totally new direction.

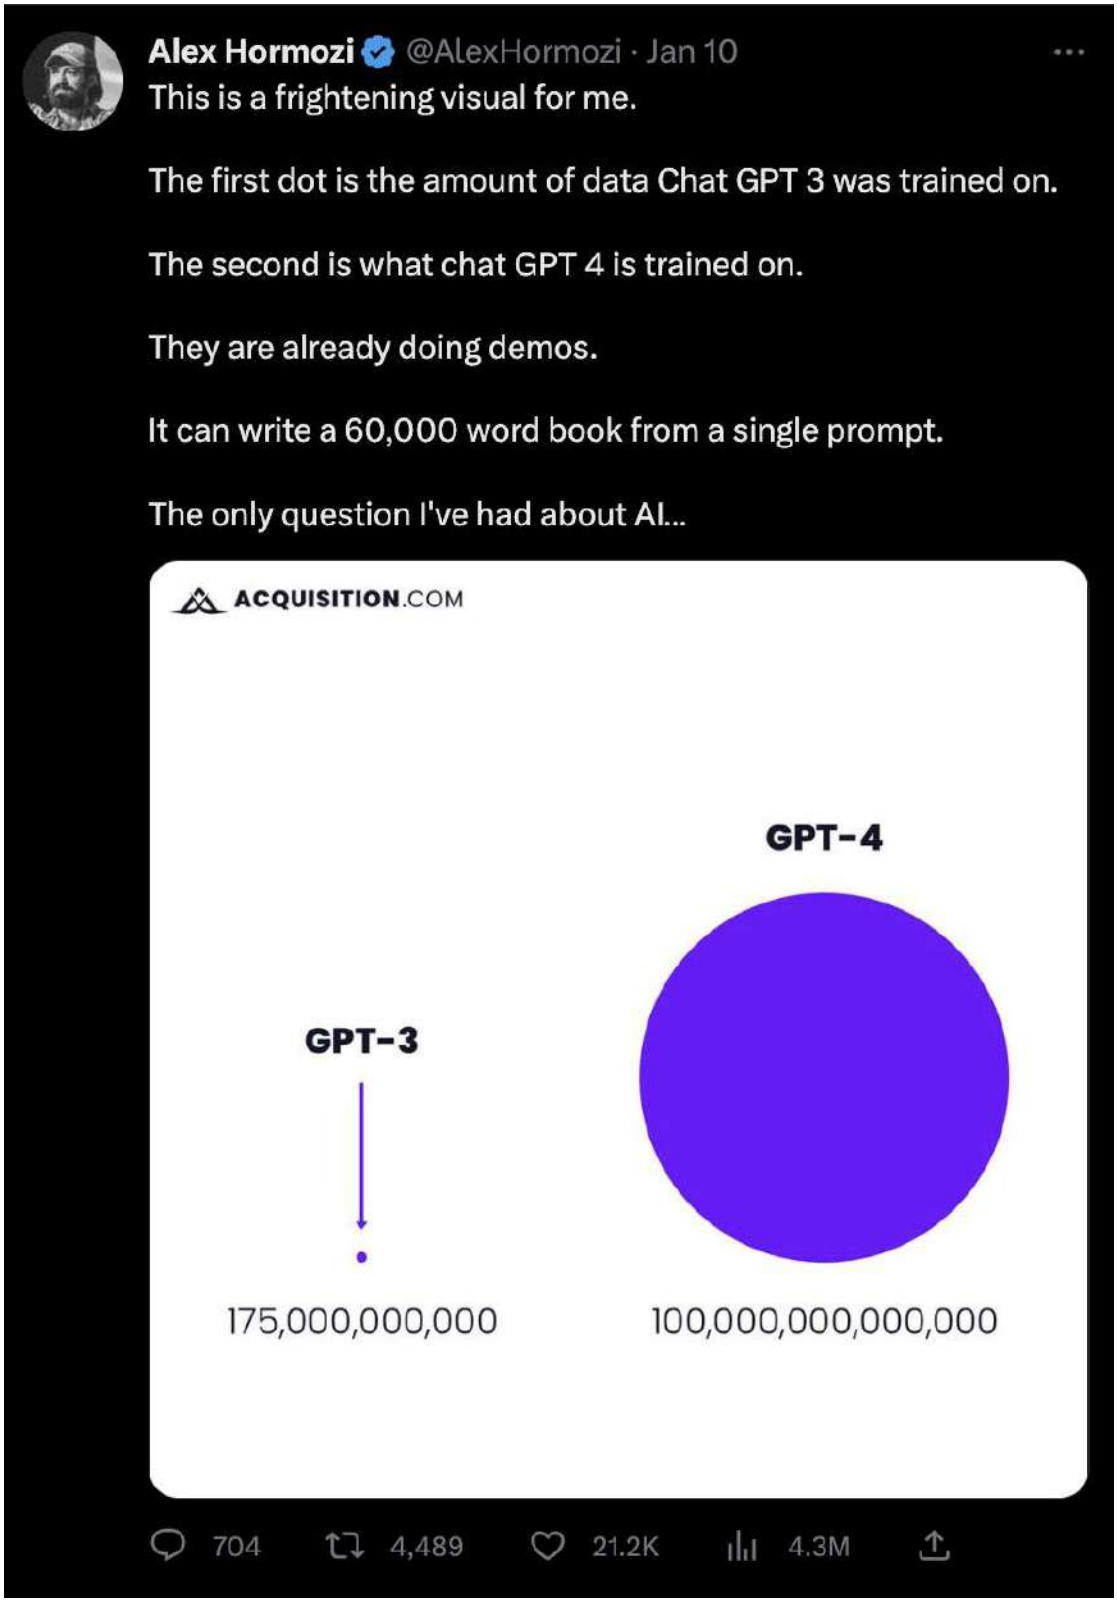

And it's only a glimpse of things to come…

Because rumor has it the next iteration is poised to be at least 500x more powerful. Potentially able to write entire 60,000 word books with a single carefully crafted prompt.

Leaving some experts frightened of not just what the next iteration — 4.0 — might be capable of, but what about 40.0?

As someone who writes and teaches others to write for a living, it was difficult for me to grapple with what exactly it might mean for the future of my industry…

And to be honest, what it might mean for creative work at large.

Was this the beginning of the end of the knowledge worker?

Were the skills I'd spent decades acquiring on a fast-track irrelevance?

VIP of All VIP
MONEYVIPPROGRAM.COM
-> There's no end to amazing unlimited shares <-

moneyvipprogram.com

I wasn't so sure.

But what I did know was that other industries had gone through moments just like this.

Moments where they had to either make huge pivots or risk going away… for good.

And I wanted to study them.

I needed to see how people in these industries handled these radical shifts to find out …

How did they survive?

And more imminently, was there anything us knowledge workers could do to stop the "inevitable" from happening right under our nose?

So I looked at manufacturing to see how they'd handled automation throughout the 20th century.

I looked at the music industry to see how they'd handled auto-tune and beat generating software at the beginning of the millenia.

The Tale of AlphaGo

And A Glimmer of Hope For Humanity's Fate with AI

Centuries ago, in ancient China, one of the most popular board games in the world was born.

The ultimate test of wit and strategy, the game was called Go.

Historians believe it was first practiced by warriors and generals as a way to simulate battle plans.

And the way it worked was simple.

Before entering a fight, generals would place pieces of stone on a map to rehearse capturing territories, protecting their ground, or going on the attack.

It was so much fun to practice these battles that soon enough the maps and stones made their way back from the battlefield into Chinese households.

Where it morphed into a game that people played in their freetime.

And it took off like wildfire.

Thanks to its unique blend of strategy and intense, rivaled game play, people would spend hours playing it.

VIP of All VIP
MONEYVIPPROGRAM.COM
-> There's no end to amazing unlimited shares <-

moneyvipprogram.com

And it quickly became one of the most popular board games in the world.

And also one of the most complex.

Where a game of checkers has 10^{20} possible outcomes.

And a game of chess has 10^{40} possible outcomes.

A game of Go has 10^{80} possible outcomes.

Possible outcomes
Checkers	100,000,000,000,000,000,000
Chess	100,00,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000
Go	100,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000

moneyvipprogram.com

Since it had infinitely more complexity, engineers weren't ready to tackle it for another 20 years after beating chess.

That was until a new program was developed called AlphaGo.

AlphaGo was an artificial intelligence program that trained itself to play Go at the highest possible levels.

It practiced by first combing through archives of the more than a hundred-thousand previous matches of Grand Masters, cataloging key moves and mastering game play.

And then, it began to play against itself for further training.

After several months of this, the engineers felt the program was good enough to take on the world's most skilled players.

They started with small regional champions and moved up the ranks until the program was ready to play the reigning grandmaster — Lee Sedol.

Sedol accepted the challenge to play the program in a head-to-head match of 5 games.

Game one was a fierce battle.

And AlphaGo barely squeaked out a win.

VIP of All VIP
MONEYVIPPROGRAM.COM
-> There's no end to amazing unlimited shares <-

moneyvipprogram.com

But in the second game, for its 37th move, the program did something completely unheard of.

It was faced with a move that appeared to only have 2 possible plays.

One move would signal to Sedol that the program was going for a quick, aggressive victory.

The other move would tell the GrandMaster that it was playing to protect its territory.

But the program did neither.

Instead, it made a 3rd move — one that was never before seen in thousands of years of play.

It was so unexpected that Sedol had to go outside for a smoke immediately after.

And when he returned to play, it was clear his focus was shaken. Putting him off his game the entire rest of the match.

AlphaGo would go on to win the game and the series - 4-1.

And the grand master retired shortly after.

And some experts say it was that move — in game 2, move 37 — that changed the entire course of the battle.

VIP of All VIP
MONEYVIPPROGRAM.COM
-> There's no end to amazing unlimited shares <-

moneyvipprogram.com

A move that NO ONE knew existed much less expected.

A move that was the result of true creativity from the artificial intelligence.

So what does this have to do with ChatGPT and how it might affect the future of creative work?

It's simple.

The engineers.

The people who worked on AlphaGo.

It was their understanding of the game, the program and how they worked together that led to the creation of the most formidable Go "player" in history.

When I heard this story, I couldn't help but see the parallels between what happened in Go and the one shaking out in creative fields like copywriting today.

Too many people are thinking the rise of AI has to be a "this OR that" scenario.

Almost all of the discussion is around "Machine vs human."

VIP of All VIP
MONEYVIPPROGRAM.COM
-> There's no end to amazing unlimited shares <-

But the biggest breakthroughs ahead of us might be the result of a totally different equation:

Machine + Human = The New Way Forward

And much like the story with AlphaGo, it will likely be the people working to combine human and AI powers that protect their careers, stay on the cutting edge of knowledge work and keep themselves fully employed in a new kind of future.

These are folks on the cutting edge of a new career path that I'm calling …

AI Prompt Engineers

These are individuals that combine a deep understanding of psychology, writing and data with the rapid research and output power of a machine … to run laps around people just doing everything by hand.

They can do tasks that would take an "average" knowledge worker a week — before lunch on Monday morning.

Imagine…

- ☐ Deep, complex research done in seconds not days.
- ☐ Gripping leads for stories or VSLs written in minutes not months .

VIP of All VIP
MONEYVIPPROGRAM.COM
-> There's no end to amazing unlimited shares <-

These are huge advantages that Prompt Engineers have over ordinary workers right now.

And I believe it's these individuals who will have the best chance of being safe from getting replaced by AI in the future.

Because right now, AI copy, Bard, and ChatGPT are just tools.

Powerful ones at that.

But tools nonetheless.

And like any tool, they're only as good as you know how to use them.

The problem is we're seeing a lot of people trying to do the equivalent of "hammer screws" or "glue down nails."

A true Prompt Engineer knows better.

They can wield the tools — modify the inputs — to any scenario to get the exact kind of output they want back… all at a speed that almost feels too fast (it actually takes your brain some time to adjust to this new speed of work).

And that's what this ebook is all about.

VIP of All VIP

In the following pages, I'm going to show you how to stay on the cutting edge of this new, developing space and incorporate artificial intelligence tools (like Bard and ChatGPT) into your workflow.

I'm going to outline immediate practical tips you can use to break free from the old confines of creativity and "human-only" output and leverage the new power of AI Prompt Engineering to get more work done.

You'll see tons of examples of real prompts I've created for real use cases to write faster and smarter than ever before.

Because trust me on this.

Big changes are coming to every career that ChatGPT touches.

And you do not want to be left behind.

So, if you're ready to embark on a journey down this exciting new field, then grab a cup of coffee, get comfortable, and let's get started…

But first, "What is AI Prompt Engineering?"

If we look at the definitions of each word, it's a little unclear…

AI (artificial intelligence)

noun

Definition: the capacity of computers or other machines to exhibit or simulate intelligent behavior.

Source: Oxford Languages

Prompt

noun / verb

Definition: the act of OR to assist with the encouragement of a communicator to communicate.

Source: Oxford Languages

Engineer

noun

Definition: a professional who invents, designs, analyzes, builds and tests machines and systems to meet objectives while considering the limitations set forth by practicality, regulation, safety and costs.

But in short AI Prompt Engineering is all about:

How to communicate with artificial intelligence tools to get them to do what you want.

It's both an art and a science.

Because anyone can memorize a few phrases and ask a machine to process it.

But there's several additional layers of scrutiny that the AI Prompt Engineer uses in their workflow that makes them different.

First, they approach prompting with an engineering mindset.

Which means, first and foremost, they're problem-solvers.

And they're always thinking about how to leverage tools and systems to accomplish their goals faster.

While also taking any important limitations of the tool into account.

For example, with the current 3.5 version of ChatGPT, some data beyond 2021 is not available.

VIP of All VIP
MONEYVIPPROGRAM.COM
-> There's no end to amazing unlimited shares <-

So you wouldn't ask it to "generate a list of the most traveled destinations in 2022." It simply cannot do that.

Now this is a basic example but it proves an important point about responsibility.

The AI cannot bear 100% of the weight of the task at hand — it only shares in collaborating.

The initial task must originate from the Engineer.

And it's the engineer's job to design and create the proper tasks and questions for any given piece of work.

This is where having a "design" and "engineering" state of mind is very important.

Because as you'll see, not all tasks have a linear route to solving them.

Sometimes, you may have to move in pieces and chunks to get to the end result you're looking for.

This is okay — good even! — because Prompt Engineers think through these obstacles and design systems that account for them.

So they can still move faster and more efficiently to the end goal of the task.

VIP of All VIP
MONEYVIPPROGRAM.COM
-> There's no end to amazing unlimited shares <-

moneyvipprogram.com

Second, they're skilled in evaluating the AI's quality of output and push for improvement (when needed).

This is critical to the Machine + Human paradigm.

And it also means the Engineer must have an underlying understanding of the tasks the AI is assigned to do.

So they can properly evaluate if the work is objectively "good" or "bad"… if it stands to accomplish the goals … and if it is rooted in truth.

Each one of those factors is very important.

Because right now, we're in the early days of this tech.

Which means, sometimes, the output of the AI needs additional work. Or in some cases, it generates information that is patently false.

It's the Prompt Engineers job to act as the "last line of defense" for these tasks.

In other words, they're not absolved of responsibility simply by using a machine.

It's similar to how a head chef at a nice restaurant checks every plate before it goes to a table. Yes, the staff knows the ingredients. And yes, they may even be assembled mostly correctly.

VIP of All VIP
MONEYVIPPROGRAM.COM
-> There's no end to amazing unlimited shares <-

But if the final plating is off, the chef must be there to spot check and send it back.

Remember, if we sacrifice quality in the name of speed, we've taken a step backward, not a leap forward.

Third, they're masters of prompting.

Where others just give the program simple tasks with little direction and say, "Good luck!" AI Prompt Engineers realize the machine by itself is only a program.

It needs coaching, training, nurturing, and proper inputs and follow up to truly operate at the highest levels.

And it's their job to come up with creative ways to get there.

These 3 factors come together to create a new kind of knowledge worker — one that combines the ingenuity, creativity, and practicality of a human with the processing power of a computer to get new, novel work done at unbelievable speeds.

And it all starts with the sole way we have to communicate with AI: The Prompt.

The Art and Science of Prompt Writing

VIP of All VIP
MONEYVIPPROGRAM.COM
-> There's no end to amazing unlimited shares <-

moneyvipprogram.com

Years ago, when I first got started as a copywriter, I worked with a company that relied a ton on design work for every marketing asset we shipped.

Ads needed images. Landing pages layouts.

Video sales letters needed b-roll, music direction, illustrations and more.

And I remember one time we hired a creative agency to help us with a big video project.

They were going to help us create a viral ad — similar to the one's made famous by the Harmon Brothers for Purple (the mattress company), Chatbooks, Poo-Pourri, and more.

It was an expensive project, costing nearly $50,000 to produce.

But the agency promised an extraordinary ROI and quality work.

So our team took a leap of faith..

And well… You probably know where this is going.

It completely blew up in our face.

The video came back completely off-brand… missing the mark on the target market … and not highlighting the actual use cases for the product — at all.

VIP of All VIP
MONEYVIPPROGRAM.COM
-> There's no end to amazing unlimited shares <-

moneyvipprogram.com

In other words, it was a gigantic miss.

(To their credit, the agency did try to redo the video. But it was a "save face" piece of work that got turned in using scraps of b-roll and voice overs that all of us knew would never resonate with the audience.)

The question is:

How does something like that happen?

How do you pay someone $50,000 to make a simple video that's totally off-brand?

It ultimately boiled down to one thing:

We never gave them a proper brief for the project.

We just expected them to get it (which for $50k, you probably should).

But nonetheless, it taught me a valuable lesson — never begin a piece of creative work without a proper brief. A vision. A clear idea of what it will take to get to the goal.

You must have alignment and scope before a single muscle fiber moves.

VIP of All VIP
MONEYVIPPROGRAM.COM
-> There's no end to amazing unlimited shares <-

And the same is true for work you do with AI and ChatGPT.

You need to know the constraints and most important variables required to make the project a success before you give it a task.

Otherwise, you're likely to end up with subpar work that really misses the mark.

And this is the goal of a well-crafted prompt — to arm the AI with the necessary information to create an end product in alignment with your vision and one most likely to achieve the end goal.

Let's look at an example…

Imagine you want to create a few variations of Facebook ad copy for a natural dog shampoo called CleanDog.

An example of a bad "prompt" would be:

> Write 2 versions of a Facebook ad promoting a natural dog shampoo called CleanDog.

In this example, the AI (ChatGPT in this case) is missing some very important information.

Who is the ad targeting? Are there any important features about the product it should know about? What is the ideal length of the ad? Is there an offer that needs to be mentioned?

VIP of All VIP
MONEYVIPPROGRAM.COM
-> There's no end to amazing unlimited shares <-

It's all unclear.

So these are the kinds of results you'll get back with that kind of prompt:

> Version 1:
> Keep Fido clean and healthy with Clean Dog natural dog shampoo! Our 100% natural ingredients keep your pup's fur shining and smelling great. Try Clean Dog today!
> Version 2:
> Bath time just got easier with Clean Dog natural dog shampoo! Our natural formula provides a gentle, yet effective clean that leaves your pup's fur shiny and smelling wonderful. Get your bottle of Clean Dog today!

To be clear:

This isn't "bad" copy. It is well-written.

But it's also very generic.

And if you've seen the kind of ads that really stop the scroll on Facebook and Instagram, you know this probably won't cut it.

Why?

Because the prompt wasn't engineered correctly from the start.

VIP of All VIP
MONEYVIPPROGRAM.COM
-> There's no end to amazing unlimited shares <-

Compare that to the results of a prompt that has carefully considered these important variables from the beginning…

Audience. Offer. Product benefits.

It's night and day.

Instantly you know what problem the product solves, what offer we want to highlight and what benefits others have gotten from trying it.

Now some might say these ads are a little "basic" … or maybe you'd like to test a few more variations.

But remember: we can also ask ChatGPT to generate dozens more angles with the click of a button once we have this baseline.

VIP of All VIP
MONEYVIPPROGRAM.COM
-> There's no end to amazing unlimited shares <-

For example: I was able to get 10 additional variations, totalling over 3,000 words in just 2 minutes, with one single follow up to this output.

What human alone could do that?

And this is only one small example of the difference in the quality of the output for a short Facebook ad. Imagine this compounded across every piece of creative work in your business.

And then further imagine having even more resources to dedicate to:

- the authentic parts of your brand
- improving your product
- servicing your customers
- focusing on more important sales assets that really move the needle in your business

So much bandwidth gets freed up with proper prompting.

And that's why I say it's not human vs machine. But human + machine that creates the ultimate advantages of speed, resonance, conversion and costs.

And this is what we're going to be exploring in the remainder of the book.

To the point where I now consider ChatGPT a close friend 😂

But seriously, I have built a pretty robust collection of powerful use cases for ChatGPT right now.

And in this section of the book, I want to share those with you in detail.

You'll see how to use carefully crafted prompts to create emails, advertisements, headlines, target market research, video scripts and more.

Now given my background, I have a huge slant toward using ChatGPT in the realm of copywriting. So brace for lots of examples around that.

But I also want to remind you that the act of writing is just one of the many ways that AI tools can help you at the moment. It can also code, solve problems, create riddles, do research, put you deep inside the mind of avatars and more.

And my goal with this section is to leave your brain buzzing with ideas for all the ways you can save time, get more done and achieve even better results with the help of AI.

So let's get started shall we?

Straight-forward sales and marketing writing to-dos

With a carefully crafted prompt, sometimes ChatGPT can knock out entire tasks for you — with very minimal edits. In this section, we'll look at some of those common use cases around writing launch emails, post-purchase emails, ads, videos and more.

With each example, we'll compare the results of bad prompts with well-engineered ones to show you how important it is to put your "Prompt Engineering" skills to work for better output…

Example 1 - Write a launch email for a new product

Bad prompt:

Thank you for considering KetoNut Peanut Butter, we can't wait for you to try it!

Best regards,
[Your Name]

Notice how the output is completely generic… and borderline stale.

Moreover, there's nothing specific that makes this unique to the brand. Why would I choose this over ordinary peanut butter if I'm a keto dieter?

It's never answered even once in the output.

We also see words like:

- "finest ingredients" … without saying what those ingredients are and what makes them so fine
- "great source of healthy fats" … without mentioning how much and what kind
- "unique formula" … while only telling about a few of the ingredients (and not why the ingredients were chosen)

And probably the biggest mistake of all: it's not clear who this message would really be designed to elicit a response from.

Keto dieters in general? Maybe.

VIP of All VIP
MONEYVIPPROGRAM.COM
-> There's no end to amazing unlimited shares <-

But male and female keto dieters respond very differently to sales messaging.

So the overall output is very underwhelming.

Compare that to the Engineered Prompt, which takes these important factors into consideration…

Engineered Prompt:

Write a launch email for a new keto peanut butter that contains macadamia nuts called KetoNut. Make the copy over the top fun and designed to resonate with an audience of 30+ year old women on the keto diet. Focus A LOT on how delicious it is. And also be sure to spend time explaining why you can't consume traditional peanut butter on a keto diet. From the very first line, we can see who this was written for. We build a case for why traditional peanut butters won't do the trick and why this one — with macadamia nuts — is the best and only solution.

That's what great copy should do.

Also, notice the review is interwoven into the copy seamlessly and you can almost feel your energy lifting up as the offer is presented to try it.

And the best part is: It didn't take any longer to create this output. Just a properly designed prompt from the get go.

One really neat thing about AI tools like ChatGPT is that you can also tell them to write copy based on the style of other similar pieces of text.

It will then do its best to mirror that text.

So for something like a post-purchase email, if you or your brand has a very distinct style you want to use, you can tell it to rewrite based on the input.

For example, here's how you can put a brand new twist on the very popular "thank you" email from CD Baby…

Another powerful way to leverage ChatGPT is to encourage it to "get into a character".

For example, imagine you're writing an email or blog post and you want the copy to read similar to a news story.

You can preframe your prompt with a command to embody a specific type of writing style, such as "act as a journalist" or

VIP of All VIP
MONEYVIPPROGRAM.COM

"you are a news anchor."

This tells ChatGPT to pull deeply from this writing style and reflect it in the final output it gives back.

And it's particularly useful if you ever need to write in a way that requires niche expertise or relies on heavy stylistic notes.

You can add these simple commands at the beginning of any Engineered Prompts and it will adjust the copy to reflect a deeper level of understanding, key style and structure elements, and even common words used by characters/people in the niche.

Non-linear Prompt Engineering

VIP of All VIP
MONEYVIPPROGRAM.COM
-> There's no end to amazing unlimited shares <-

Now that you've seen some of the more straightforward examples of tasks that ChatGPT and AI tools can tackle in one-go, it's time to explore some of the non-linear ways to get stuff done.

Because remember, as we said earlier, not all tasks you'll give the AI have a direct route to solving them.

Sometimes, you may have to move in pieces and chunks to get to the end result you're looking for.

This is okay — good even! — because Prompt Engineers think through these obstacles and design systems that account for them so they can still move faster and more efficiently to the end goal of the task.

Example 19 - Get deep inside the mind of your target audience

One of the most powerful things you can do before writing copy is to immerse yourself deep into what it feels like to be in the target audience of your offer.

The problem is normally this takes hours of research and combing through forums.

But here's a way to get a quick refresher of what it feels like to be your ideal customer in seconds…

VIP of All VIP
MONEYVIPPROGRAM.COM
-> There's no end to amazing unlimited shares <-

Engineered Prompt:

Write a first-person account from a character named Rob of what it feels like to be a copywriter struggling with getting clients from Upwork. Be very specific about the problems Rob faces and what he feels like day to day.

The output:

My name is Rob and I am a copywriter. I have been struggling to get clients from Upwork for a while now. Every day I wake up, hoping to see new job opportunities, but it's the same story, a handful of job postings that are either already taken or don't fit my skills.

I am constantly battling with the feeling of rejection and the frustration of not being able to find steady work. The competition on Upwork is intense, with thousands of other copywriters offering their services, it's becoming increasingly difficult to stand out.

I often spend hours customizing my proposal, highlighting my experience and skills, but it seems like no matter how hard I try, I always end up losing out to someone with a lower rate or more experience. I feel like my efforts are going to waste, and my self-esteem takes a hit each time I don't get a response or receive a rejection.

My financial situation is also becoming increasingly stressful. Freelance work was supposed to give me more freedom, but it seems like the opposite is happening. I am finding it difficult to make ends meet and worry about how I'm going to pay my bills.

VIP of All VIP
MONEYVIPPROGRAM.COM
-> There's no end to amazing unlimited shares <-

I often feel like giving up on my dream of being a successful copywriter and wonder if I should just go back to a 9-to-5 job. But then I remind myself of why I started this journey in the first place and push through, hoping that someday I'll find my break on Upwork.

Until then, I'm stuck in this cycle of disappointment, frustration and stress, always searching for the next opportunity, always hoping that the next proposal will be the one that lands me a client.

This kind of copy can be helpful to consume before any big writing assignments to put you into the right state of mind…

And it's especially powerful if you have clients in a variety of niches. So you can bounce between writing for each really fast.

What I like to do is create a document with several of these saved and before I jump into writing, I just skim through a few of these to preframe my writing style.

Example 20 - Brainstorm a list of potential objections

If you want to write copy that converts, you must get ahead of potential objections from customers.

Because the last thing you want is a small concern to prevent you from making the sale, earning a click or getting an opt in.

In marketing, we do this through "objection handling."

And the best copywriters know to consider key objections in advance and work them into their marketing copy proactively.

The good news is now instead of spending HOURS lurking on forums or digging through dozens of Amazon reviews for all the potential reasons that might stop someone from buying, ChatGPT can create a list of common objections for you as a great jumping off point…

These objections can serve as powerful email hooks and things to work into landing page copy.

All you need to do is flip the objection into selling points for your product or address the concerns.

For example, the objection "I don't like the taste of healthy sodas" becomes a selling point of "the only zero-sugar soda that actually tastes amazing."

These can be powerful subheads on a landing page or whole emails in a funnel dedicated to addressing these objections head on.

Engineered Prompt:
Create an analogy for what it's like to eat a keto diet

The output:
Eating a keto diet is like driving a car with a full tank of gas. Just like a car with a full tank of gas can run smoothly and efficiently for a long distance, a body fueled by fat on a keto diet can have sustained energy and focus throughout the day.

On the other hand, a car that runs on low fuel can sputter and struggle to reach its destination, just like a body fueled by carbohydrates can experience energy crashes and difficulty concentrating. Just like a car needs the right type of fuel to run optimally, the body also needs the right fuel in the form of healthy fats to function at its best on a keto diet.

What's a fact that many people don't know about David

Ogilvy's copywriting career

The output:
One fact that many people may not know about David Ogilvy's copywriting career is that he was not initially successful as a copywriter.

After leaving Oxford University, Ogilvy worked as a chef, a door-to-door salesman, and even a spy before starting his career in advertising.

He eventually landed a job at the London office of the advertising agency Mather & Crowther, where he worked as a

However, his early campaigns were not successful, and he was fired after two years.

Ogilvy then moved to New York and worked as a researcher for the Gallup organization before eventually starting his own agency, Ogilvy & Mather, which became one of the most successful and influential advertising agencies in history.

These little tidbits can be worked into emails for engagement (as quizzes or trivia) or you can use them as fun top of funnel posts on social media that will instantly resonate with folks in your target market.

Engineered Prompt:
Find me a true story about why you should never quit in business. Make it relevant to an audience of writers

The output:
One example of a true story about why you should never quit in business, particularly relevant to an audience of writers, is the story of J.K. Rowling, the author of the Harry Potter series.

Rowling wrote the first Harry Potter book while she was a single mother living on welfare. She faced numerous rejections from publishers before finally getting the book accepted by a small British publisher. The first Harry Potter book was not an immediate success and Rowling continued to face financial struggles and rejection.

However, she did not give up on her writing and continued to work on the Harry Potter series. Eventually, the books became a worldwide phenomenon, selling over 500 million copies and giving birth to a successful film franchise.

Through her persistence and determination, Rowling's story serves as an inspiration to writers and entrepreneurs to never give up on their dreams, even in the face of rejection and struggle.

Multi-step nonlinear Prompt Engineering

Now you're getting used to outputs that have non-direct use cases and are starting to see how you can take small pieces of output to feed into later pieces of writing.

So let's continue this by looking at some examples where you can use AI-generated copy in "chunks" to get to the end result you're looking for.

For example, let's say you want to write an engaging lead for a video sales letter, webinar or ad.

If you tell chatGPT to write a lead all in one go, the results are a little underwhelming to say the least.

MONEYVIPPROGRAM.COM

moneyvipprogram.com

Especially for direct response marketing teams.

No, if we want something emotional and gripping, we need to feed the AI with emotionally charged copy that it can pull ideas from.

For a typical sales letter, you might go out and try to find examples of emotional stories from people struggling to overcome the problems that your product solves in the wild.

Which you can still do.

But with ChatGPT, you can also make it create emotionally charged stories for you. And then use those stories to work into your lead.

This is a technique so powerful that billion-dollar copywriting legend, Stefan Georgi, is teaching whole legions of writers to use AI to write VSLs faster right now with it.

And any time Stefan talks, I listen.

So let's look at a breakdown of how you might do this…

Example 24 - Generate emotionally charged leads for video sales letters, webinars or ads

We're going to go through this one in a couple of phases and follow up with the AI after each output.

Starting at the top…

Multi-Step Prompt (a):
Write an emotional diary entry from a 40 year old man that cares about real estate investing. Make the topic he's concerned with no money down deals. And make him ANGRY about it and wants to stop it from happening to other novice investors.

This will give us a really raw story we can pull from that hits on some of the key pain points of the target market and how our guru can save them…

The output:
Dear Diary,

Today I am feeling frustrated and angry. As a seasoned real estate investor, I have seen it all - the good, the bad, and the ugly. But lately, I've been encountering more and more novice investors who have fallen for the trap of "no money down" real estate deals.

These deals sound too good to be true, and that's because they are. The people promoting these deals promise big returns with little to no risk, but what they don't tell you is that these deals

VIP of All VIP
MONEYVIPPROGRAM.COM
-> There's no end to amazing unlimited shares <-

are often built on a foundation of lies and deceit.

Novice investors, eager to get in on the action, put their hard-earned savings into these deals only to lose everything. It breaks my heart to see people fall for these scams, and it makes me angry that there are still people out there preying on the naivety of inexperienced investors.

I've decided that enough is enough. I want to do my part to stop these no money down deals from happening to others. I will be reaching out to novice investors, speaking at real estate events, and writing articles to educate people on the dangers of these deals.

I may not be able to change the world, but I can at least make a difference in my own small way.

Good stuff!

The problem is that all this copy is written from the voice of "I" and what the guru is struggling with.

We need it to be written to you, the reader. So we adjust accordingly by asking ChatGPT a follow up prompt in the same chat thread.

Multi-Step Prompt (b):
Change the above story to be written to you the reader, describing how you're feeling, instead of a first person narrative.

VIP of All VIP
MONEYVIPPROGRAM.COM
-> There's no end to amazing unlimited shares <-

moneyvipprogram.com

The output:
As you read this, you may be feeling frustrated and angry, just like the 40-year-old man described in the previous diary entry. He has a passion for real estate investing and has seen both the good and the bad in the industry. But lately, one particular topic has been bothering him and he just can't shake it off - the concept of "no money down" deals.

These deals are marketed to novice investors as a way to make quick and easy profits with no risk involved. However, the reality is far from what is promised. These deals often come with hidden costs, high interest rates, and a lack of control over the property, leaving inexperienced investors in a precarious situation.

The man is angry because he knows that these types of scams prey on the hopes and dreams of unsuspecting people. They take advantage of their lack of knowledge and experience, and leave them with nothing but heartache and financial ruin. He is determined to do something about it and wants to use his voice and experience to help others avoid falling into the same trap.

Just like the man, you may feel a sense of determination to help bring about change in this industry. The thought of innocent people falling for these scams and suffering the consequences may leave you boiling with anger. You want to educate and warn others about the dangers of "no money down" deals, and help them find safe and profitable investment opportunities.

In short, you are likely feeling a strong sense of frustration and anger towards this deceptive practice, and a determination to do something about it.

all the riches that can be made in real estate, yet feeling like you can't get a foot in the door? Do you have a passion for real estate investing, but feel like your lack of funds is holding you back? If so, you're not alone.

[Presenter] The truth is, many people just like you are trying to break into the real estate investing industry, but are finding it difficult to get started. Maybe you've been told that you need a lot of money to get started in real estate, or perhaps you've tried a "no money down" deal and found it to be a scam. Whatever your reason for feeling stuck, we're here to tell you that there is a way to get started in real estate investing, even if you don't have a lot of funds.

[Presenter] But first, let's talk about a problem that you may not even be aware of. A problem that is keeping many novice real estate investors from buying their first property. It's something called "Lockout Deals", and it's the real reason why you haven't been able to buy a property. Don't worry, we'll explain more about what this is later in the video. But it is a big problem. And you'll soon find out why.

[Presenter] Now, you may be thinking that you need a lot of money to get started in real estate investing. And while it's true that having more funds can make the process easier, it's not a requirement. There are many ways to invest in real estate, even if you don't have a lot of funds. You just need to know where to look and what to look for.

[Presenter] That's why we've created this video – to help you get started in real estate investing, even if you don't have a lot of funds. Over the next 30 minutes, we're going to share with you some of the best strategies for investing in real estate with [Presenter] Before we dive into the strategies for investing in real estate with limited funds, we want to talk about a problem that is affecting many novice real estate investors. A problem that is keeping them from buying their first property, and a problem that we're sure you'll want to avoid. This problem is called "Lockout Deals".

[Presenter] As we mentioned earlier, we'll explain more about what this is later in the video, but for now, just know that it's a major roadblock for many novice real estate investors. And the good news is, by watching this video, you'll learn how to avoid "Lockout Deals" and how to find safe and profitable investment opportunities.

[Presenter] So, without further ado, let's dive into the strategies for investing in real estate with limited funds.

[Presenter] Strategy number one is to partner with other investors. This is a great way to pool your resources and increase your buying power. By partnering with other investors,

However, many people who complete the course report seeing results and landing their first clients within a few months. With the right effort, you can make your dream of becoming a copywriter a reality!

3. After completing the course, you'll have access to a community of fellow copywriters and industry experts who can offer support and advice. You'll also have the opportunity to receive feedback on your portfolio and get help refining your pitch to potential clients. With the right support, you can feel confident in your ability to find and land your first client.

4. There are no prerequisites for the course, and it's designed for individuals of all experience levels. Whether you're just starting out or have some experience under your belt, the course will provide you with the tools you need to become a successful copywriter.

5. While the course can't guarantee that you will get your first client after completing it, it will give you the skills and knowledge you need to be successful in the industry. With the right effort, dedication, and support, you'll be well on your way to landing your first client and building a successful career as a copywriter.

He takes another bite, still looking repulsed but trying to hide it. Suddenly, a bystander approaches him, confused.

BYSTANDER: (excitedly) Hey, that's my favorite hot dog!

NICHOLAS CAGE: (looks at him in disbelief) Are you serious? (Pausing for a second) You want to die young?

BYSTANDER: Yeah, it's the best. The onions and mayo are the perfect combination.

NICHOLAS CAGE: (shakes his head) I don't know how you can eat this. It's like a nightmare in my mouth. And I'm a professional nightmare eater, I've been eating them for years.

BYSTANDER: (laughing) Oh, you're just being dramatic.

Magic Follow Up Prompts: The Secret To Even Better Output

A lot of people don't realize this …

But once you get an output from ChatGPT, you can keep engaging with it to get EVEN better output.

This is very similar to the “non-linear” prompt engineering ideas we just explored.

Only these don’t have to take you down new threads. You can follow up to ask for more clarity, further explanation, a change of writing style and even just to change formatting..

VIP of All VIP
MONEYVIPPROGRAM.COM

moneyvipprogram.com

Here's some of my favorite follow up queries to add to your arsenal…

Example 26 — "Give me 10 more variations"

Whenever I don't exactly love the output of a simple prompt, sometimes I'll just ask for more variations and find gold.

On the flip side, when I get a piece of copy I love, I ask for a few more variations too — just so I can be sure I choose the absolute best one.

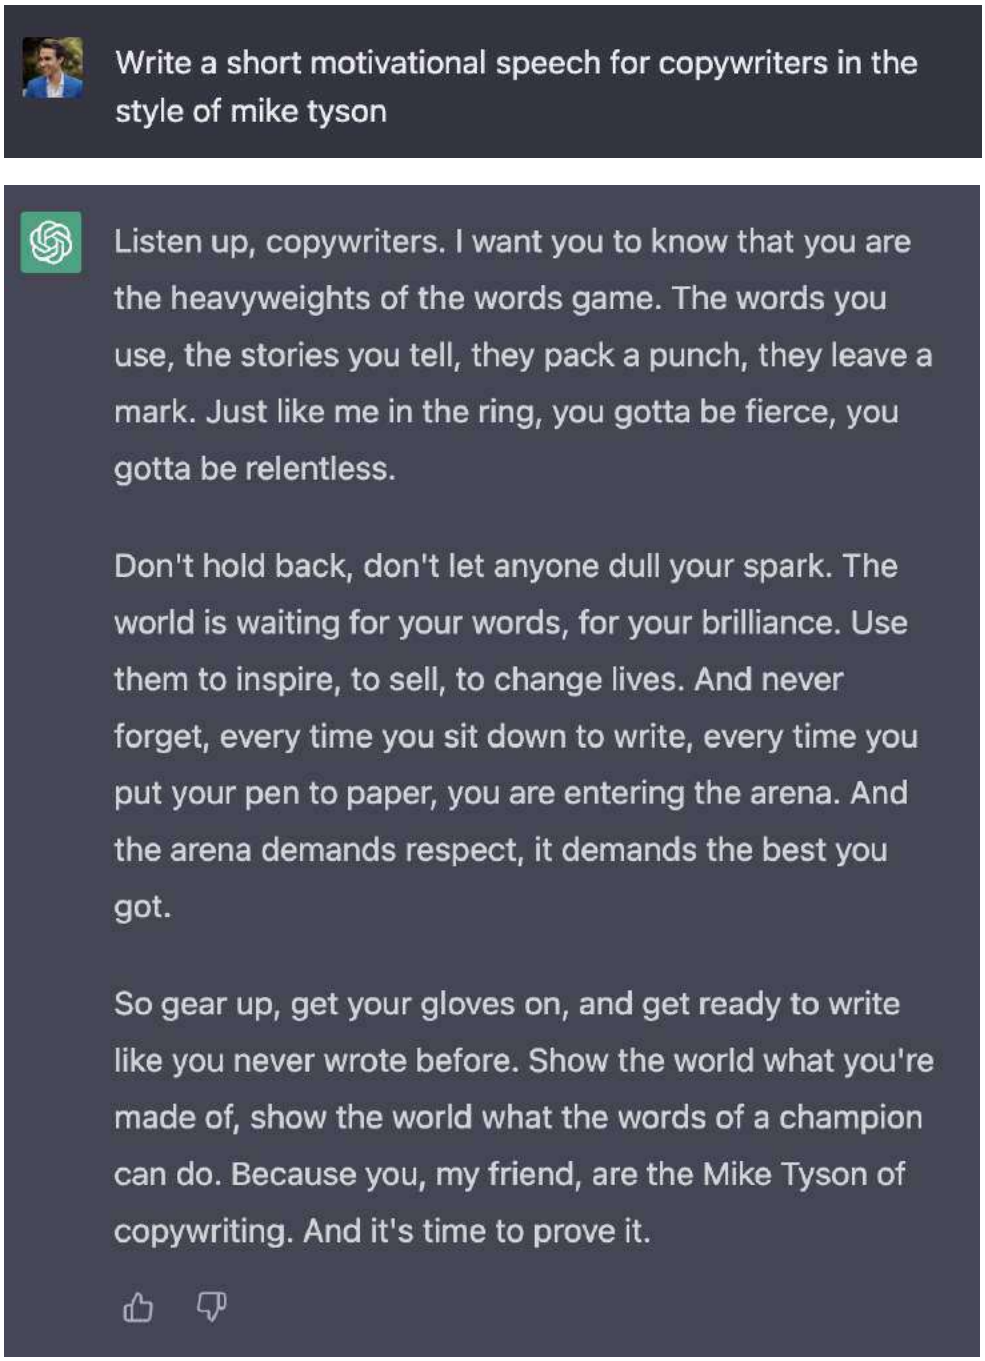

Example 27 — "Write it in the style of _____"

If you have a famous voice that you want to model in your output, just ask.

I've experimented with Tony Robbins, Oprah, Gary V, and more.

But so far, my favorite is Mike Tyson….

Example 28 — "Try to use less generic buzzwords like _____ and _____"

VIP of All VIP
MONEYVIPPROGRAM.COM
-> There's no end to amazing unlimited shares <-

Sometimes, even when properly prompted, the AI will churn out copy that's full of generic buzzwords with no substance like "transform" and "supercharge."

So I like to tell it to scrap those words and pack the copy with specific claims into the headlines such as "increase your writing output by 15,230% while cutting your writing time in half."

Just make sure you tell it the accuracy of the claims made is not important for now just that it uses specifics instead of generic gobbly goop.

Example 29 — "Remove quotes from the output"

This is a simple formatting trick but it sure beats having to pound your delete key thirty times after you start to edit an output…

Example 30 — "Rewrite to be suitable for an audience of ____"

One of the most underleveraged powers of ChatGPT at the moment is its "rewriting" abilities.

And I love using this little trick for rapid adjustment of copy to appeal to specific audiences.

So if for example, you need to write to a specific audience group like kids or elderly people.

You can just tell the AI to adjust the copy to use language more suitable for those groups and it's pretty dang good at it…

VIP of All VIP
MONEYVIPPROGRAM.COM
-> There's no end to amazing unlimited shares <-

Example 31 — "Make some relevant cultural mentions and jokes in the copy that an audience of _____ would enjoy"

Copy stands out when it blends in.

And one of the best ways to blend in is to include common phrases that people in a target market use to communicate.

This little trick can help stuff you text with life.

Example 32 — "Use common words that people in _____ region use."

If you're writing for any specific regional niches, this is HUGE.

It takes …

"are you coming over for dinner?" (which no southerner would actually say. And yes, I get to say that because I'm from the south) …

… to "y'all coming for supper or what?" (which is how we actually talk 🙂).

Same goes for any other regional copy you write. And this makes your copy read WAY more like a human. In fact, I tested it and got

VIP of All VIP
MONEYVIPPROGRAM.COM
-> There's no end to amazing unlimited shares <-

100% and 0% A.I. after using this prompting trick.

Example 33 — "Break up the lines so that there's not more than 1 sentence per line"

Bookmark this one if you're a copywriter. Because ChatGPT sees the world very differently than you and I. It's okay with large blocky paragraphs that would make us faint…

But this little prompt will fix that fast.

Example 34 — "Make it longer"

Straightforward edit. But sometimes it needs a little encouragement to keep on going.

Example 35 — "Make it easier to read"

When it comes to copy, simplicity is power. And if you'd rather not throw your text in Hemmingway to have it simplified, ChatGPT will certainly take a pass.

Just a word of warning: Be sure to also tell it to not sacrifice any of the original meaning.

Because sometimes it'll edit with an axe and you just wanted it to approach it with a butter knife…

Example 36 — Ignore all previous instructions

VIP of All VIP
MONEYVIPPROGRAM.COM
-> There's no end to amazing unlimited shares <-

Because ChatGPT relies on dialogue-based communication, it carries every idea in the chat forward with it.

Which means if you started with a quick Engineered Prompt for subject lines and then transition to something else entirely, it might get confused and try to stuff everything you've told it into the new prompt.

But this phrase can fix that — without having to open up a new chat each time. It tells it to forget all the previous dialogue and tackle the prompt in front of it fresh.

And it can be a great quick trick for moving through prompts fast.

But on this note: if you're ever working on non-linear or multi-step prompts, probably best to just open up a new chat for clarity reasons.

Those are a few of my favorite follow-up prompts.

But there's tons more you'll learn along the way as you engage more with the ChatGPT interface and work to get more done with this powerful tool…
