HOW TO USE THIS

A reference for the terms used throughout this course. Skim it now, and come back whenever a word is unfamiliar.

Organic	Getting views and customers for free through content, rather than paying for ads.
Hook	The first moment of a video, the part that stops the scroll. A visual hook is what the viewer sees in the opening frame; a text hook is the words on screen in those first seconds.
Clip	A single short piece of video, one of the building blocks you assemble into a finished post. In AI organic, your clips are generated.
Stitch clips	Viral or attention-grabbing pieces of content taken from social media and used as a hook or inside of your promotional video to stop viewers from scrolling and make it more engaging. You can generate them or source them online.
Burner	A dedicated research account whose feed you have trained to show you nothing but product videos, used to find products. Separate from the accounts you post from.
The algorithm	The platform's system that decides who sees your video. You do not control it; you feed it signals (watch time, engagement) and it decides distribution.
Going viral	A video getting distribution far beyond your follower count, reaching a large audience quickly.
Watch time / retention

imarketing.courses

How long people watch before swiping away. The single most important signal to the algorithm. High retention means the video gets pushed to more people.

Engagement	Likes, comments, shares, saves. Secondary signals that tell the algorithm people care about the video.
Per mil (per million views)	How much revenue a product makes per million views, the core efficiency number in this business. A strong result is in the thousands of dollars per million views.
Conversion rate	The percentage of people who land on your site and actually buy.
Session	One visit to your website. Lots of sessions with no sales points to a conversion problem, not a traffic problem.
AOV (average order value)	The average amount a customer spends per order.
Margin	The profit left after the cost of the product and fees. Organic's whole advantage is high margin, since you are not paying for traffic.
CTA (call to action)	Telling the viewer what to do next, such as "link in bio" or "comment a keyword."
Primed account	An account that consistently gets good views (10K or more) because it has been posting good content regularly. There is no secret trick to it.
ICP (ideal customer profile)	The specific person you are making the video for, the one who will actually buy.
Saturation	When a product or concept has been run so much that it is hard to profit from. As the next section explains, this is usually the concept being saturated, not the product.
