The Six Psychological Triggers (CLARCCS)

There are six triggers that make people more likely to trust, follow, and eventually buy.

These come from social psychologist Robert Cialdini, adapted for content.

Understanding these isn't about manipulation. It's about aligning your content with how humans naturally build trust and make decisions.

Trigger 1: Comparison (Social Proof)

People look to others to determine what's valuable and correct.

For AI influencers, this shows up as:

- Comments showing engagement ("this changed my life")
- Follower counts (once you have them)
- Saves and shares
- Community testimonials (once you have a paid offer)

Early on, you won't have social proof. That's okay. Focus on the other triggers. Social proof builds over time.

Trigger 2: Liking

People are influenced by those they like and feel connected to.

For AI influencers, liking comes from:

- A character that feels warm and approachable
- Content that makes viewers feel understood, not judged
- A voice and tone that feels like a trusted friend or mentor
- Consistency that builds familiarity

This is why character design matters. An unlikeable character can say all the right words and still not convert.

Trigger 3: Authority

People trust those who seem to know what they're talking about.

For AI influencers, authority comes from:

- Character appearance matching the niche (monk = spiritual authority)
- Specificity of insights (vague = no authority, specific = authority)
- Confidence of delivery (certain, not arrogant)
- Demonstrating deep understanding of their situation

You don't need credentials. You need to demonstrate genuine insight.

Trigger 4: Reciprocity

When someone gives us value, we feel compelled to give back.

For AI influencers:

- You give genuine value in free content
- Viewers feel they've received something meaningful
- When you offer something paid, they feel good about supporting you

This is why you don't hard-sell immediately. You build reciprocity through consistent free value first.

Trigger 5: Commitment/Consistency

People want to act in alignment with their past actions.

For AI influencers:

- Someone saves your video (small commitment)
- They follow you (larger commitment)
- They engage with more content (pattern established)
- They join your community (consistent with identity they've built in their mind)

Each small action makes the next action more likely.

Trigger 6: Scarcity

Limited availability increases perceived value.

For AI influencers (used sparingly):

- Limited spots in community or program
- Time-sensitive offers
- Exclusive content for members

Don't overuse this. It's for conversion content, not general content.

How to use these triggers:

Don't try to force all six into every video. Every piece of content naturally builds these triggers over time.

Authority builds through consistently demonstrating insight.

Liking builds through consistently being warm and understanding.

Reciprocity builds through consistently providing value.

Social proof builds as your audience grows.

Commitment builds as viewers engage repeatedly.

Your scripts should naturally incorporate these elements, not artificially stuff them in.
