The Money Lesson

Everything we've covered so far builds audience and trust.

The general content scripts, affirmations, problem-solutions, and quiet truths, they grow your following.

They make people feel understood. They build the psychological triggers (reciprocity, liking, authority) that make people WANT to support you.

But at some point, you need to convert that audience into revenue.

That's what this lesson is about.

And here's the thing most people get wrong: they think CTAs are a completely separate type of content.
Like you're either posting "value content" OR "selling content."

That's not how it works.

The Truth About CTAs in General Content

Before we get into dedicated conversion scripts, let me tell you something important:

You can (and should) add soft CTAs to your regular content.

Not every video. Not aggressively. But naturally, when it makes sense.

A soft CTA at the end of a general content script doesn't kill the value. It extends it. It says "if this resonated, here's how to go deeper."

Examples of soft CTAs you can add to any script:

After an affirmation script: "If you needed to hear this today, follow for more. I'm here every morning."

After a problem-solution script: "Save this for the next time your mind won't quiet down. And if you want the full system, the link is in my bio."

After a quiet truth script: "If this found you at the right time, you're not alone. There's a whole community of us. Link in bio."

After any script: "Follow if you want more like this." "Save this. You'll need it again." "Share this with someone who needs to hear it."

These aren't hard sells. They're invitations. They assume the viewer got value and offer a natural next step.

The rule: The CTA should feel like a gift, not an ask. "Here's more of what you clearly want" not "give me something."

Start adding these to maybe 35-45% of your general content. Not every video.. that gets exhausting. But enough that your audience knows there's more available when they're ready.

When to Use Dedicated Conversion Content

Soft CTAs in general content are the baseline.

But there are times when you need content specifically designed to convert. Dedicated CTA scripts.

Use dedicated conversion scripts when:

1. You're launching something - New community, new offer, new lead magnet
2. You're filling spots - Limited enrollment, cohort starting, scarcity is real
3. Your audience is warm - They've been following for a while, engagement is high, they're ready
4. You have social proof - Testimonials, results, comments you can reference
5. The timing is right - End of week, end of month, moments when people make decisions

Don't use dedicated conversion scripts when:

1. Your account is brand new - Build trust first
2. You've been selling hard already - Audience fatigue is real
3. You have nothing valuable to offer yet - Don't sell for the sake of selling
4. Your general content isn't performing - Fix the foundation first

The ratio that works for most AI influencers:

- 70% general value content (with occasional soft CTAs)
- 25% soft-sell content (value-first but clearly pointing somewhere)
- 5% direct conversion content (the ask is the point)

Always adjust based on what is already working for you.. as you keep testing you will have more data to play with

The Psychology Shift for Conversion Content

General content psychology: "Let me help you feel better."

Conversion content psychology: "Let me help you get the full transformation."

It's not manipulation. It's completion.

Think about it: if someone watches 20 of your videos and genuinely gets value, they WANT to go deeper.

They want the full system. They want access to more.

Your conversion content isn't taking from them. It's offering them what they're already looking for.

The mindset shift:

Stop thinking: "How do I convince them to buy?" Start thinking: "How do I show them that this is the next logical step in their journey?"

People don't buy because you convinced them. They buy because they convinced themselves and you made it easy.

Your job in conversion content:

1. Remind them of the pain (that they're already aware of)
2. Show them the transformation is real (proof it works)
3. Make the next step clear (what to do)
4. Remove the risk (guarantee, low barrier)

That's it. No manipulation required.

The Three Levels of Conversion Scripts

Level 1: The Soft Bridge

What it is: Value-first content that naturally bridges to an offer. 80% value, 20% CTA.

Feels like: "Here's something helpful... and if you want more, here's where to go."

Best for: Regular use, warming up audience, low-pressure invitations

Structure:

- Hook (pain or desire)
- Value (insight, reframe, or technique)
- Bridge ("and if you want the complete system...")
- Soft CTA (link in bio, DM me, etc.)

Example script:

"Most people try to fix their anxiety by fighting it. Deep breaths. Positive thoughts. Forcing calm.

But anxiety isn't a battle you win by fighting harder. It's a signal you learn to decode.

When you understand what your anxiety is actually trying to tell you, everything shifts. It stops being your enemy and starts being your guide.I teach a simple framework for this inside the Inner Peace Community. It's the same process that helped me go from panic attacks to genuine calm.

If you're tired of fighting yourself, link's in my bio. Come learn with us."

Why it works:

- Opens with value (reframe on anxiety)
- Delivers a genuine insight (anxiety as signal, not enemy)
- Bridges naturally ("I teach this...")
- CTA feels like invitation, not pressure

Level 2: The Testimonial Bridge

What it is: Lead with proof that transformation is possible, then invite them to get the same result.

Feels like: "Look what happened for them... you could be next."

Best for: When you have real results to share, building credibility, overcoming skepticism

Structure:

- Hook (result or transformation)
- Story (brief testimonial or outcome)
- Connection ("you might be feeling the same way they were...")
- CTA (here's how to start)

Example script:

"Sarah sent me this message last week.

She said: 'I used to lie awake for hours every night. My mind wouldn't stop. I tried everything. After two weeks in the community, I'm sleeping through the night for the first time in years. I actually look forward to bed now.'If you're where Sarah was—exhausted, frustrated, wondering if peace is even possible for someone like you—I want you to know: it is.Your brain isn't broken. It just needs new patterns. Sarah learned them. Hundreds of others have too.Link in bio if you're ready to be next."

Why it works:

- Opens with proof (real result)
- Specific details make it believable ("two weeks," "sleeping through the night")
- Connects viewer to the testimonial ("if you're where Sarah was")
- CTA implies they can have the same result

Level 3: The Direct Ask

What it is: The offer is the point. Clear, confident, direct.

Feels like: "Here's what I have, here's what it does, here's how to get it."

Best for: Launches, Story posts, limited-time offers, when audience is highly warmed up, scarcity situations

Structure:

- Hook (direct about what you're offering)
- What it is (clear description)
- What they get (benefits, not features)
- Why now (urgency or scarcity if real)
- CTA (exactly what to do)

Example script:

"I'm opening 50 spots in the Inner Peace Community this week.

Here's what you get inside:Daily guidance to rewire your anxious mind. Live sessions where I answer your questions directly. A private group of people who actually get it—no judgment, just support.

Most people spend years in therapy trying to get what our members experience in weeks.

I only open enrollment once a month because I keep the community small. Spots filled in 3 days last time. If you've been waiting for a sign, this is it.

Link in bio. Join us before Friday."

Why it works:

- Opens with clear offer (50 spots)
- Specific benefits (daily guidance, live sessions, private group)
- Social proof embedded (members experience in weeks what takes years)
- Real scarcity (only opens monthly, filled in 3 days last time)
- Urgency (before Friday)
- Direct CTA

The Conversion Script Formula

No matter which level you're writing, this formula works:

1. Hook - Stop them with relevance Either the pain they feel, the result they want, or something unexpected.

2. Agitate or Validate - Make them feel it For pain: twist the knife a little. Remind them how bad it is. For desire: paint the picture of what's possible.

3. Bridge - Connect their situation to your solution "That's exactly why I created..." or "I was where you are, and here's what changed..."

4. Offer - What they get (benefits, not features) Don't say "you get 12 modules." Say "you'll finally understand why your brain works against you."

5. Proof - Why they should believe you Testimonials, results, your own story, credentials (if relevant).

6. CTA - Exactly what to do next Be specific. "Link in bio" or "DM me the word PEACE" or "Comment READY below."

7. Urgency (optional) - Why now Only use if it's real. Fake scarcity destroys trust.

You don't need all 7 in every script. But this is the skeleton.

CTAs That Actually Work

The words you use in your CTA matter.

Weak CTAs:

- "Check out my link"
- "Go to my bio"
- "Learn more"

Strong CTAs:

- "Link in bio. Join us."
- "DM me the word PEACE and I'll send you the details."
- "Comment READY if you want in."
- "Tap the link before spots fill."
- "Save this, then go join the community."

What makes a CTA strong:

1. Specific action - They know exactly what to do
2. Low friction - One step, not multiple
3. Implies outcome - "Join us" implies community, "get the system" implies solution
4. Confidence - You're inviting, not begging

The DM/Comment trigger trick:

"DM me the word [WORD] and I'll send you the link."
"Comment [WORD] and I'll send you the link."

This works incredibly well because:

- It starts a conversation (algorithm loves DMs)
- It's personalized (you can follow up)
- It filters for serious people (lazy people won't do it)
- It creates commitment (they took an action)

Use a word related to your offer/niche/video

The "Ask Without Asking" Technique

Sometimes the best conversion content doesn't even look like conversion content.

The setup: Tell a story about someone who got results. Don't pitch at all. Let comments ask how.

Example script:

"Three months ago, Maria messaged me saying she hadn't had a good night's sleep in four years.

Last week she told me she fell asleep in under ten minutes every night this month.

No medication. No meditation apps. Just a fundamental shift in how she relates to her own mind.

I'm so proud of her."

That's it. No CTA. No link. No pitch.

What happens? Comments asking "how?" "What did she do?" "I need this."

Now you respond to comments. You start conversations. You provide value AND point people to your offer in a completely natural way.

This works because:

- It's pure social proof
- There's no sales resistance (nothing to resist)
- Curiosity does the work
- You look confident (not desperate to sell)

Use this sparingly. It's powerful but loses effect if overused.

What to Sell (If You Don't Have an Offer Yet)

You might be thinking: "This is great, but I don't have anything to sell yet."

Here's the progression most AI influencers follow:

Stage 1: Audience Building (No offer)

- Just post value content
- Build following and trust
- Add soft CTAs for follows and saves

Stage 2: Lead Magnet

- Create a free PDF, guide, or video series
- Collect emails/contacts
- CTA: "Free guide in bio"

Stage 3: Low-Ticket Offer ($10-50)

- Mini course, meditation bundle, ebook
- Proves people will pay
- CTA: Direct to purchase

Stage 4: Community/Membership ($30-100/month)

- Recurring revenue
- Deeper access to you/content
- CTA: Join the community

Stage 5: High-Ticket Offer ($500+)

- Coaching, programs, intensive experiences
- Smaller volume, higher revenue
- CTA: Apply

You don't need to have Stage 5 figured out before you start.

But you should be building toward SOMETHING. Even if it's just a lead magnet. Give your audience somewhere to go when they're ready to go deeper.

We will go more in-depth on offer creation & selling in another module

Common Conversion Mistakes

Mistake 1: All value, no ask You post incredible content forever and wonder why you're not making money. Your audience doesn't know there's anything to buy. Ask.

Mistake 2: All ask, no value You pitch constantly and wonder why people unfollow. You burned the trust you never built. Value first, always.

Mistake 3: Apologizing for selling "I don't usually do this, but..." "Sorry to be salesy, but..." Stop. If your offer helps people, selling it is a service. Be confident.

Mistake 4: Vague CTAs "Check out the link for more info." More info about what? What will they get? Where does it go? Be specific and benefit-driven.

Mistake 5: No offer to sell You have 100K followers and nothing for them to buy. Create something. Anything. Capture that demand.

Mistake 6: Wrong timing Launching on a random Tuesday when your last 10 posts flopped. Build momentum first. Launch when engagement is high.
