imarketing.courses

CONTENTSYSTEM.AI

MODULE 5.2

AI-Native Product Research

The second school of thought. Instead of chasing what is already viral, find products nobody has run yet and bring them to the platform first.

imarketing.courses

MODULE 5.2

AI-Native Product Research

The burner method is great for finding products that are already proven and trending. But there is a second school of thought on product research, and it leads in the opposite direction.

The thinking goes like this. When you find a product on your burner, that product is already being run by other people on the platform. You are coming in after it is already viral. The bigger opportunity is to find a product that is not being run on the platform yet and bring it there first. If you are the first to bring a product to a platform, you are original to that audience, and originality is what the platform rewards with the most reach. You get the whole market to yourself before everyone piles on.

Two ways to find untapped products

1. Pull products from paid ads into organic

Look at products that are performing well in the paid ads world and bring them to organic. This used to be impossible, because you could not make a paid-style problem-solving product go viral organically without a real before-and-after. Now that you can generate that transformation with AI, you can take a proven paid ads product, which usually solves a real problem or insecurity, and run it organically where nobody else is running it. These convert hard because they solve a real problem, not just because they look flashy.

2. Go straight to the source

Browse AliExpress or Alibaba and look for products that solve a deep problem or insecurity and that can show a clear transformation. You can also use an AI assistant like Claude to do this for you. Ask it for a list of products that solve an insecurity or problem and that show a visual transformation you could market with AI. It gives you a list, you sort through it, and you pull the ones that make sense.

imarketing.courses

Two approaches, opposite directions

BURNER

Proven, trending products.

You know it already works. The downside: you will have competition on it from day one.

AI-NATIVE

Untapped products nobody is running.

You get to be first. The downside: you are taking more of a bet on whether it will hit.

BOTH ARE TOOLS

Both work. The right one depends on the situation, and as you get more experienced you will use both. The burner for jumping on proven winners. Untapped research for owning a market before anyone else gets there.